Social Studies lesson video At the end of this video, I ask you to read in your textbook... don't do that today. We'll do that reading together, as a class, in a zoom this week. https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=_tFvnznuulc Civics: the study of the rights and duties of citizenship Vocabulary Rule of Law: The Constitution says what the government can and cannot do. Government leaders make the laws. They must obey the laws and the Constitution. Limited Power: The Constitution limits the power of the United States government in several ways. For example, much power is saved for the states. The people in one part of the country can make laws that are different from the laws in another part. The states give some of their power to counties and cities. Power is shared by these three levels of government: Local, State, National (Federal) There are also Tribal Governments. Local (Counties and sometimes cities): police, fire, libraries, water, garbage State: care and driver licenses, state lands, and resources, state roads National (Federal): national parks and forests, national defense, money and mail, relations with other countries Tribal Governments also exist.
